FOR EMERGENCIES.

A SHELF AND THE THINGS THAT SHOULD BE KEPT THERE.

Remedies That are to be Ready for Sudden Sickness—A List of Medicines and Their Uses—Medicine, Cement, Shoe Polish, Etc.

If there is anything that adds to one's comfort in an emergency, it is a shelf prepared for emergencies. That is clear. Accidents, nervousness, sudden pain, midnight calls for help, parcels that want doing up, broken crockery or ornaments, all find a ready answer to their calls on this carefully prepared shelf. It is so easy to prepare and keep in order, can be small or large, as one decides to contain its contents to a few things or enlarged to many. Intend to give a list for the smallest one that I think it advisable for any one to keep, be she keeping house or boarding.

First of all come the things that are to be ready for illness, which is a most common ailment for faintness, headache or a sudden attack of dizziness, although for the latter there is nothing equal to a tablespoonful of raw flour in a glass of cold water, to be taken in two doses half an hour apart. A closely covered little box of raw flour is easily kept on the shelf to be often renewed, but it gets musty. A small tin can of flour and mustard, mixed in equal parts, ready to mix into a paste for a mustard plaster, is to me a pleasant arrangement for a hastily required plaster than the "mustard leaves" found at the drug stores. In a little box beside this can should be old linen and cotton rags, for the other half of the plaster, as well as for cuts and bruises; also a strip of flannel or "finger" band and three-quarters of a yard long, to be put upon the outside of a cotton cloth, several times folded and wet in cold water, for a compress for a sore throat. Keep your case of court plaster in this box of rags, and a spoon of white linen thread, both conveniently near the necessary pair of small scissors.

Camphorated oil, which is best when made at home by dissolving camphor gum in warm olive oil until no more will dissolve, is invaluable in sore throats or chests or a cold on the lungs. Rub in well and there will be no cold taken afterward, as there is after the old-fashioned "goose grease." Vaseline is good for this purpose also, as well as for many others that every one knows about. There is nothing for chapped hands equal to glycerine and tincture of hydriatic, fifteen drops of the latter to an ounce of glycerine. Wash the hands in warm water thoroughly, and before wiping rub in a little or good deal of the mixture, according to the need.

VARIOUS OTHER REMEDIES.
Tannin, a dry, greenish powder, is a great comfort where a sudden severe nose bleed occurs in the family. Once snuffing it up well into the nostrils generally ends the trouble. Tannin forms, with water, a good gargle for sore throat, as it is a healing astringent. It is the best thing for severe chafing, especially for infants. The effect is almost magical. Extract of hamamelis is another indispensable for this emergency shelf. It is really good for nearly all the ills mentioned on the wrapper of the bottle. An excellent way to get hamamelis is by the quart, and it is the cheaper way. The principle of my emergency shelf always holds olive oil, alcohol and ammonia. Hot summer days and headaches find me grateful for my bay rum bottle. I quite forgot to put arsenic in my remedy list, although it is hardly used as a cure for anything of emergency for cuts or wounds. Both are to be handled with water when used.

It is very pleasant to turn from the above list and point you to my medicine bottle. How many times you will use it if convenient on its shelf. Next it should stand a bottle of stimulus, or any of its relatives in the cement family. If Clyde's head comes off, or the better did cover breaks in two, or your favorite china cup gets into so many bits that it will only do for an ornament after a vigorous use of the cement, you will be glad of this remedy. A bottle of shoe polish or a box of shoe paste is a handy thing when one dresses in a hurry. Last, but not least, reserve a ball of twine. If you are fortunate enough to possess a silk line, with pretty ribbons and a pair of scissors, to hold your string ball, it is delightful. Otherwise, a ball on the end of the emergency shelf will do much hunting for string and much vexation of spirit.—Junius Stanford in Good Housekeeping.

An Authority on Jack Fiddling.
Upon one occasion an illiterate relative of Mr. Jefferson, who had long refrained from thrashing his relatives upon his celebrated kinsman, thought all the while extremely eager to see him, was prevailed upon to visit Monticello. Introduced into the drawing room, he was introduced by the host to the assembled company, and during this performance he slipped up several times on the well waxed floor, his awkwardness being, of course, overlooked. Then seating himself in a stiff, embarrassed attitude, he kept perfectly silent. After chatting with several persons Mr. Jefferson took a seat beside him and endeavored to make himself very entertaining. He touched upon a variety of topics, as was his wont, or until he got a throne suited to the tastes or abilities of his interlocutor; but all in vain, for the embarrassed relative remained as dumb as an oyster.

At length, in despair of drawing a word from him, Mr. Jefferson happened to ask him if he was fond of jack fishing. The countryman's eyes snapped, and he immediately poured forth a garrulous lullaby in regard to his favorite sport, to all of which Mr. Jefferson, assuming as were the others present, listened attentively. When he had ended Mr. Jefferson opened up eloquently on the same subject, and displayed such an intimate knowledge of jack fish that the countryman was held spellbound, and as soon as the great signer stopped he rushed for his hat and bolted from the house, despite the most persuasive entreaties for his return in the "backgammon" room.—Baltimore Sun.

The Lawyers' Great Procrastinators.
If I was called upon to select the greatest procrastinators in the world, I would select the lawyers. They wait until the last moment, and then come rushing in to do something when they know they are too late. They then sit around because they are not allowed to do something that they know they have no right to do under the rules of the court and the laws of the state. I believe if the courts were kept open until midnight nine months in the year, you would find some of these lawyers rushing in at 12 o'clock to file a paper that should have been filed two weeks before. Many of them wait until the last day and the last hour of the term with their stipulations and motions, when they appear and confuse the records and upset all previous calculations.—Circuit Clerk in Globe-Democrat.

Wealthy Women Addicted to Drink.
There have been established within a few years, on the fashionable avenues, millinery establishments that have become the resort of women of wealth addicted to the use of stimulants. The front room has all the paraphernalia of a handsome millinery establishment displayed on its shelves and tables. Back of this room is another, fitted up as a parlor, in which comfortable sofas or lounges form the preponderance of the furniture. Here are light wines, brandy and whisky for the use of the regular habitues of the place, and if they indulge too freely the sofa offers the opportunity for sleep. Meanwhile my lady's carriage stops the way while coachman and footman exchange gossip with others of their craft similarly occupied in waiting for their disheveled mistresses.—Alfred Trumble in New York News.
